

COMMERCE CAREER SERVICES

providing superior customer service to our students and employers
www.comm.virginia.edu

RECRUITING INTERNATIONAL APPLICANTS

International students make up over 20% of McIntire's undergraduate population and provide immeasurable benefits to our increasingly diverse community. Please note that most international students are in the United States on student visas (F-1 and J-1), although they are eligible to accept employment in the United States under certain conditions. Please see * Easy Guide to Hiring Foreign Graduates for more information.

Distinctive qualifications of international students:

1. Often exhibit terrific strengths in character, such as resiliency, adaptability, flexibility, perseverance, self-discipline, resourcefulness, curiosity, graciousness, endurance, loyalty, and intrepidity.
2. Demonstrate a strong capacity for learning and applying new knowledge, as evidenced by their rapid acquisition of formal language skills, slang terminology, cultural norms, and North American academic and business customs.
3. Typically have a history of high achievement and intellectual promise starting at a young age. They are seasoned in the art of setting and meeting goals and are highly motivated to be successful.
4. Broaden diversity efforts with their well-developed cross-cultural fluencies.
5. May have, or can develop, valuable connections overseas. They are multilingual and have direct experience living, studying, and working in a foreign country.
6. Are eligible to work for a U.S.-based company for a total of 12 months with no added cost or obligation to an employer (paperwork completion is assumed by the student, school, and U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services).

*Published with permission from the McCandlish Holton Immigration Practice Group, June 2010

EASY GUIDE TO HIRING FOREIGN GRADUATES

Do not let fear of the simple visa process prevent you from hiring the best and brightest graduates available.

U.S. law provides several ways for employers to hire foreign college graduates. For example, CIS (formerly INS) issues tens of thousands of H-1B work visas each year. In addition, graduates of U.S. institutions with F-1 status are eligible for "practical training" and are hired regularly by U.S. employers.

The two most common mechanisms for hiring foreign graduates are:

I. PRACTICAL TRAINING: For graduates in F-1 student status, Optional Practical Training allows up to 12 months of employment after graduation (those holding science, technology, engineering, or math degrees may get 17 additional months). The student must obtain permission from the university and a work authorization card from the CIS. The university can provide additional information.

Timing: F-1 Graduates can begin working immediately upon receipt of the work authorization card.

Cost: No cost to employer. Student pays a nominal filing fee to CIS to get card.

Employer Obligations: Treat employees in practical training just like other U.S. employees in terms of pay, discipline, termination, etc.

II. H-1B VISAS: This extremely popular work visa is available to foreign nationals who (a) have at least a U.S. bachelor's degree or foreign equivalent and (b) will be working in a job that requires at least a bachelor's degree. It allows employment for 6 years, or longer. The employer must submit an application to the CIS. Approvals can take as little as 15 days.

Employer Obligations:

- There is NO need to advertise the position and NO need to determine if U.S. workers are available to fill the position. (Sole exception: Employers receiving TARP funding or funding under Section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act must first advertise to recruit U.S. workers. No other employers have this obligation.)
- All Employers must post a notice for 10 days at the worksite stating that the employer is hiring an H-1B worker, providing information about the job. This is NOT an advertisement. It is just a notice.
- Employers must pay the same wage and benefits provided to U.S. workers in similar jobs. Pay return transportation in some circumstances.

Timing: Normal processing times can take several months. However, CIS has special "premium processing" that guarantees processing in 15 days but requires an extra $1,000 filing fee.

Cost: CIS' normal filing fee for private employers is $320, plus a $1,500 "training fee," plus a "fraud prevention" fee of $500. (NOTE: University employers, primary/secondary schools, and certain governmental and nonprofit research organizations do not pay the "training fee." Employers with 25 or fewer employees pay only $750 "training fee.")

H-B Cap: CIS issues 65,000 new H-1B approvals each year (CIS year – October 1 through September 30). CIS accepts cases beginning April 1 for Oct. 1 H1Bs. Exceptions to the cap include University jobs; nonprofits affiliated with universities; nonprofit research organizations; H-1B extension with same employer; and H-1B transfer to new employer. Graduates with U.S. advanced degrees have special allocation of 20,000 H-1Bs above the 65,000. Citizens of Chile and Singapore have a special allocation of H-1Bs.

Other visa options may be available (e.g., TN for Canadians or Mexicans working in certain jobs; E-3 visa for Australians in professional positions, and other possible options)

Questions: Contact McCandlish Holton Immigration Practice Group – Mark Rhoads
(mrhoads@lawmh.com) 804-775-3824; Helen L. Konrad (hkonrad@lawmh.com) 804-775-3825. 1111 East Main Street, Suite 1500, Richmond, VA 23219.

Published with permission granted by Mark Rhoads, June 2010