This edition of the Investors’ Report comes to you with our sincere thanks for making 2018-2019 a remarkable record-breaking fundraising year for the McIntire School. Your essential investment in the School empowers us to grow our incomparable programs while attracting and retaining world-class scholars whose teaching and research help us maintain our position as a worldwide business education leader.

With your extraordinary gifts, the School set a new Annual Fund record, surpassing our goal for an incredible 18th consecutive year. Thanks to the contributions of more than 3,000 donors, the Annual Fund exceeded the previous fiscal year’s total of $4.3 million to reach $4.5 million, a 6% increase. This surge in support strengthens our efforts and creates opportunities that are vital for ongoing innovation and necessary flexibility as we move forward.

Annual leadership gifts from McIntire Dean’s Society members also increased in 2018-2019, with a record 536 members contributing $2,500 or more (or $1,000 or more for young alumni). These leadership gifts are instrumental in enhancing McIntire’s excellence across all of its programs and services and in maintaining the School’s prominence in global business education.

With these goals in mind, and as we look forward to our Centennial in 2021, we are launching the Inspire the Next Century Campaign this fall in support of the University’s Honor the Future Campaign. With an overall goal of securing $250 million for the School, one centerpiece of our Campaign is a crucial $100 million endowment for the Centennial Fund for Faculty Excellence. The Fund sustains the School’s preeminent faculty in perpetuity, safeguarding recruitment, retention, research, and student engagement.

Contributions to the Centennial Fund support faculty research and McIntire’s continued expansion in highly important areas on timely and important subjects ranging from combating cybersecurity attacks, to applying the power of business analytics, to forging a sustainable future through managerial strategy, corporate culture, and technological and social transformation.

Highlighted throughout this edition of the Investors’ Report are examples of innovative faculty research that are made possible with donor faculty support.

The $250 million Inspire the Next Century Campaign also designates $70 million for the construction of Shumway Hall and the renovation of Cobb Hall, providing the needed additional space to continue the growth and expansion of our existing and emerging programs. The remaining $80 million we seek to raise through the Campaign is dedicated to equally critical priorities, including our unparalleled student experience and Centers of Excellence, which facilitate curriculum innovation, interdisciplinary cross-University interaction, and thought leadership and enable important connections among faculty, students, and industry professionals. The McIntire Annual Fund, with an ambitious goal of providing $50 million in unrestricted support throughout the Campaign, is the final and essential component in maintaining our excellence into the future.

The success of these many initiatives is made possible by our exceptional students, proud parents, highly valued alumni, loyal friends, and trusted corporate partners. We thank you for your contributions to the achievements of our community, and, as always, your generous support of the School. On behalf of the entire McIntire faculty and staff, I offer our sincere gratitude to you, our active and committed donors. Thanks for all that you do.

Dean Carl Zeithaml

Sabina Ewing can trace her career in tech leadership back to when she was a fourth-year Commerce student performing her first IT consulting job for the UVA Bookstore as part of her McIntire coursework. And from the earliest part of her professional life managing client engagement at Arthur Andersen’s Business Consulting practice to her current position as Vice President at Pfizer in Shanghai, Ewing credits McIntire and its faculty for acting as a vital impetus for her success. “From that very first assignment until today, as the technology leader for Pfizer’s Upjohn division, I sincerely appreciate the quality preparation that went into establishing the foundation of my capabilities and skills. I often say that I had the raw materials when I entered McIntire, but the Comm School was the sandpaper that really shaped me into being polished for a high-quality career of impact in technology,” she says.

Recalling Professor Michael Atchison and his efforts to provide a pathway for African American students to become acquainted with McIntire and its professors during a Comm Connection summer program, Ewing says the opportunities that he presented to her were key to her acceptance into the Commerce School—and are central to why she felt compelled to give to the School’s Centennial Fund for Faculty Excellence.

A cornerstone of McIntire’s Inspire the Next Century Campaign, the Centennial Fund provides support for the School’s passionate faculty in perpetuity, strategically pooling Ewing’s gift with other similar contributions of $100,000 or more made to the $100 million endowment. In addition to creating named professorships and fellowships, the fund will offer critical and flexible annual resources that compound as it grows, ultimately supplying permanent support for Commerce faculty recruitment, retention, and research.

“UVA exposed me to possibilities beyond my initial dreams, and paramount to my success was the catalyst role that McIntire played in setting me on this career path,” says Ewing. “I am supporting the fund because of the investment my brilliant professors made in me—Bob Webb, Raymond Haas, Mike Atchison, Larry Pettit, George Overstreet, and countless others. Now I’m paying the dividends through this commitment to help ensure that future generations of students have continued access to the best faculty and resources.”

The Centennial Fund for Faculty Excellence will not only safeguard McIntire’s ability to attract and retain gifted business educators who foster tight-knit connections with students, but also empower faculty to develop and expand a host of enterprises, including its renowned transformational global courses, enlightening industry career treks, timely curriculum innovation, and groundbreaking, collaborative research with scholars across the world through the School’s six Centers of Excellence.

An active, engaged alumna, Ewing notes that in addition to her gift, she has connected with the local Shanghai UVA Club and expects to host McIntire students visiting China’s most populous city in the summer at Pfizer Upjohn’s new global headquarters as well. Students will see firsthand how the Commerce School’s leading business education manifests in the careers of its outstanding alumni practitioners.

“McIntire builds leaders. Student self-governance sets you on a path to lead in all facets of your life,” she says. “We bring a strong sense of confidence, integrity, problem solving, creativity, independent thinking, teamwork, and an unwavering commitment to excellence. Those are core to my values and how I deliver for Pfizer every day.”

A key component of McIntire’s Inspire the Next Century Campaign, the Century Circle recognizes exceptional alumni and friends who commit to multiyear investments in the McIntire Annual Fund totaling $25,000 or above across five years. By providing crucial funds and a predictable cash flow, their support allows the School to pursue new value-creating initiatives and respond quickly to evolving needs and opportunities, protecting the integrity of the Commerce School’s inimitable education experience for generations of business leaders to come.

Century Circle donors Mary Beth Cardin (M.S. in Accounting ‘85), Yang Shim (McIntire ‘96), and Ben Slater (McIntire ‘05) each cherish various links to the School, but all agree that participation at this significant level offers unparalleled opportunities to further strengthen their already meaningful connections to McIntire and its vision.

Cardin, CFO for PNT Data Corp., says the School played an important role in her life. As the daughter of beloved Commerce faculty member and UVA administrator Ray C. Hunt, she grew up around the University, which eventually led her to pursue her own studies at McIntire. Years later, when her son Robert Tyler Cardin (M.S. in Accounting ‘16) attended, she was invited to become a McIntire Cornerstone Society Board member. Cardin’s gift honors her father’s accomplishments and safeguards McIntire’s mission, which she says she sees embodied in the many achievements of students and leadership during annual visits to Grounds.

“My time at McIntire allowed me to pursue many interests in healthcare, data analytics, and business integration and to work on and lead diverse teams,” Cardin says. “I hope that in some small way I can give back so that others have the same opportunities.”

Another notable alum, Shim has been a devoted supporter for the past five years, serving as a board member for McIntire’s Center for Business Analytics. The EY Partner, who has a niece in her second year at UVA and a brother on the faculty of the UVA School of Medicine, says that he and his wife, Lena, think the Century Circle presents an inspiring way to share in producing future business innovators while sustaining his family’s UVA legacy.

Shim believes the rapid pace of transformation in business and technology requires the School to have the necessary funding to quickly adapt and secure its inventive approach. “The Commerce School has been great at focusing on both culture and value creation, and the combination of inclusiveness and innovative thinking will continue to sustain McIntire as one of the top business schools,” he says.

Fellow engaged alum Slater, Director at investment firm Highlander Partners, considers himself lucky to have been a part of the School’s “unique and unparalleled” undergraduate program, where he studied under Dean Carl Zeithaml. Having maintained close ties to faculty, he was moved to become more involved.

“I only hope to do my small share to help McIntire stay on its current incredible trajectory,” Slater says. “I hope to see the School continue to adapt to what will be an ever-changing business environment, to be thoughtful and strategic about what the future holds, and to be unafraid to position itself accordingly.”
The McIntire School of Commerce is grateful for the alumni, parents, and friends who demonstrated extraordinary support by joining the Dean’s Society in 2018–2019. This year, Dean’s Society membership grew from 524 members in fiscal year 2018 to 536 members in fiscal year 2019. Collectively, leadership-level gifts from our generous Dean’s Society members make a tremendous impact on the School, and continued Dean’s Society growth will secure the School’s future success.

Leadership-Level Gifts Power McIntire’s Revived Leadership Minor

The McIntire School’s innovative business education is renowned for providing exceptional student experiences and unmatched learning opportunities that are as relevant as they are transformative. Its well-deserved reputation is the result of a longstanding dedication to continuous curriculum development that extends to all of McIntire’s degree and certificate programs.

Thanks to generous support for the Centennial Fund for Faculty Excellence by two McIntire Foundation Board Trustees and their spouses, Peter (McIntire ’88) and Alison Engel and Merritt (McIntire ’83) and Elly Lane, the Leadership Minor is being relaunched for spring 2020. After a brief pause to reevaluate the interdisciplinary coursework, a reboot has provided the necessary upgrades to refine its solid business-based approach for students from across the University interested in acquiring the strategies, skills, and abilities necessary to lead people and organizations in today’s rapidly changing, complex global environment.

Offering McIntire courses and electives made possible through strong connections with the University at large, the minor provides both Commerce School students and those enrolled in UVA’s other schools with the opportunity to benefit from McIntire’s extraordinary learning environment and global perspective.

“With the recent reintroduction of the minor, one of the things we’re doing is giving McIntire students a greater depth of understanding of the subject in a way that pairs nicely with their Commerce School education,” explains McIntire Management Professor and Leadership Minor Director Jeffrey Lovelace. “For students pursuing degrees outside of McIntire, they will get a flavor of the Commerce School that they can then utilize, applying the leadership principles they’ve learned toward their chosen field or profession.”

Electives include communications classes supplying requisite practical skills, as well as coursework to suit the diverse needs of students enrolled in different courses of study across the University. For example, Engineering majors can pick an elective more closely related to their area of study, as the minor features classes examining leadership from an engineering perspective. A new structure also gives students the possibility of sampling a course from an altogether different school than where they are completing their major, thereby presenting a wider-ranging scope of leadership and its various areas of implementation.

“If an Engineering student wants to take a course at McIntire and they’re not going to have the ability to enroll in the B.S. in Commerce, then there are options such as ‘Business Ethics’ and other leadership-related courses at the School like ‘Public Speaking & Persuasion’ and ‘Advanced Business Speaking,’” Lovelace says. “One of the great aspects of the program is that it gives students flexibility to adapt it to their interests. Classes available outside of McIntire range from ‘Moral Leadership’ in Religious Studies to ‘Modern Techniques in Finance’ in Leadership and Public Policy and ‘Issues Facing Adolescent Girls’ in Education-Human Services.”

The Leadership Minor’s relevancy and versatility for students across the University are some of its great strengths—and aspects that appealed to the Engels and Lanes, inspiring their commitments with the hope they will motivate others to support an inclusive program open to all UVA students. For students enrolled at other schools at the University, the exposure to the broader world of business through McIntire can facilitate avenues for further studies, including graduate work in highly regarded one-year degrees such as the School’s M.S. in Commerce or certificates such as McIntire’s Business Fundamentals.

Ultimately, the uniqueness of the revamped program extends beyond imparting students with the leadership knowledge that will complement their core area of study and career goals; it shares a valuable part of the inimitable McIntire experience with UVA at large.
McIntire School of Commerce

2018-2019 supporters of McIntire’s Commerce Cohort Program included Brad Singer (McIntire ’88) and Ali Singer, Eric Lawrence (McIntire ’84) and Leslie Ludwig, Procter & Gamble, and Investure. This program provides a unique academic experience for prospective McIntire students from traditionally underrepresented groups.

McIntire School of Commerce

RANKING OF THE M.S. IN COMMERCE BY THE ECONOMIST (#1 U.S.-BASED MASTER’S IN MANAGEMENT PROGRAM)
In honor of the 20th anniversary of the Ankura (formerly Navigant Consulting)-McIntire Case Competition, the top student teams faced off in the Rotunda’s Dome Room Feb. 8, 2019, the culmination of a weeklong event made all the more special by the welcome presence of Jeff Green (McIntire ’88), Senior Managing Director at Ankura and architect of the first competition two decades ago.
PricewaterhouseCoopers and McIntire: An Enduring Partnership Built on Shared Values

From sponsorship of McIntire’s Center for Innovation in Professional Services to the launch of the School’s women recruitment event Days at McIntire, long-standing corporate partner PwC has had an important, enduring association with the Commerce School that has proven beneficial for both students and the international financial services firm alike.

PwC Partner Robert Vallejo (McIntire ’92) says that the relationship consistently creates valuable opportunities on many levels. Though student interaction is highly prized by PwC, as it provides access to potential new hires who have made substantial contributions to the firm over the years, the visiting professionals—many of whom are also alumni—enjoy the opportunity to come to Grounds, share their experiences, and offer employment guidance.

“Because of the large number of McIntire graduates who work or have worked at PwC, we have a community of alumni within the firm that can continue networking and investing in each other’s career,” Vallejo explains, noting that McIntire alumni work at PwC offices around the world. “Despite working in different offices and in different lines of service (assurance, tax, and advisory), our internal McIntire network is close knit and available to each other for mentoring, advice, or providing a sounding board. Similar to how the students at McIntire look out for each other, our PwC Hoos have each other’s backs.”

PwC also collaborates closely with McIntire faculty, with professors welcoming firm representatives into the classroom and inviting their perspectives on topics ranging from the latest developments in accounting standards or the impact of digital and essential technologies on business.

A “purpose-led, value-driven organization,” the firm sponsors programs at the School that extend well beyond hiring, Vallejo says. Days at McIntire, for example, provided first- and second-year students an opportunity to interact with successful female executives. “The event was powerful and inspiring and a great opportunity for the students, no matter where they choose to start their career.”

Vallejo also points to the enthusiasm of PwC U.S. Chief Network Officer Farhad Zaman (McIntire ’93) and members of PwC’s Transaction Services team, who regularly plan for visits to the classroom, meetings with professors, and interviews with students—often after a long workday or on weekends. He believes Zaman’s personal efforts to recruit Commerce alumni and support McIntire initiatives are a direct result of the firm’s ongoing support of the School.

“The number of quality professionals we hire from McIntire makes that a very easy business decision,” Vallejo says. “The key is to continuously find new ways to make an impact. Our mission to empower women in the workforce made sponsoring Days at McIntire a perfect fit.”

Vallejo cites another relevant example illustrating why PwC’s long-lasting partnership with the School will continue: a commitment to diversity, a priority for both the firm and McIntire. “Our Chairman and Senior Partner, Tim Ryan, started the CEO Action for Diversity & Inclusion™ initiative two years ago with the support of more than 700 CEOs and university presidents,” he says, adding that McIntire Professor Andrea Roberts and PwC joined forces several years ago to educate and ultimately increase the number of underrepresented minorities admitted into the M.S. in Accounting Program.

“Our shared values of increasing diversity and inclusion in the business world showcase the power of our partnership,” Vallejo says. “Programs like these are why we’re always going to be here to support McIntire and its students.”
The McIntire Cornerstone Society recognizes alumni, parents, faculty, staff, and friends who make planned gifts or estate gifts to the School. Corporate Partners
The McIntire Corporate Partners program creates strong, mutually beneficial relationships between partner corporations/firms and McIntire faculty and students. This program provides resources and opportunities that increase a Partner’s competitive advantage; enhance recruiting effectiveness; and produce benefits such as case studies, research relationships, and internships. Corporate Partners receive a unique resource—a faculty liaison, who develops a thorough understanding of the Partner’s firm and industry and helps to educate students about available opportunities. Faculty liaisons work to increase visibility among students and strengthen the Partner’s involvement with the School. Even greater visibility and access to students are available to McIntire Corporate Associates and Investors, who enjoy all the benefits of the Corporate Partners program, as well as enhanced involvement with the School by sponsoring an annual School event, activity, or class. This sponsorship expands the Partner’s role in the School and increases the publicity associated with Partner support. We thank and recognize the 2018–2019 McIntire Corporate Investors, Associates, Contributors, and Friends:

THE CENTENNIAL FUND FOR FACULTY EXCELLENCE

"I LOVE THE FACULTY AT McIntire. Being able to walk into any office for help regardless of my relationship with the professor has been an absolute blessing for my education. They are constantly supportive, encouraging, and willing to help you achieve whatever goals you have. The professors I have had have become some of my closest mentors, and I hope that it stays that way post-graduation as well."

GEORGE "WIN" MADDOX (McINTIRE ’19)
